Judit Varga was born in Hungary in 1979. She is the first prize winner of many international piano and music composition competitions, and she regularly gives concerts as a solo pianist and as a chamber musician in several countries of Europe. Her compositions have already been introduced in bigger festivals. She finished her studies in music composition with honours in the Liszt Ferenc Academy of Music in 2005. She is continuing her studies at University of Music in Vienna, majoring in piano, music composition, applied music and music for a motion picture.

In 2001 she was a "Composer-in-Residence" in the music composing forum of Einklang (Mittersill, Austria), and she won the Kodály Zoltán music and composing scholarship of the Ministry of Education and Culture three times (2002, 2003 and 2006), and she was the winner of the Tokyo Foundation scholarship two times (2001 and 2004).

Judit Varga lives and works as a pianist and music composer in Vienna. In her wide piano repertory one can find contemporary and new compositions in addition to the most important pieces of classical music literature. As a composer she is primarily interested in setting short features, theatre performances to music, and compositions written for multimedia events and festivals.
